MISCELLANEOUS READING.

LOSS OF APPETITE IN THE SPRING. The decline of appetite in spring is not the symptom or the effect of disease; it is, as it were, the wise forethought of a sleepless instinct, which puts out its blind fearless ahead to clear away danger. Instinct, that wonderful impalpable thing, the agent of the Almighty power, the instrument of love Divine; its lesson is, that the body does not require so much food, hence the desire for it is taken away; and if men could only be induced to read that lesson aright, to practise it by simply eating according to the appetite, by not going to the table if they did not "feel like eating anything," and then resolutely wait until the next meal, and at no time eating an atom unless there was a desire for it-if such a course were judiciously pursued, the springtime would be to us a waking up to newness of life as it is to the vegetable world. But instead of thus co-operating with our instincts, "we take something," bitters, pills, any thing that anybody advises as good for "whett-ing up the appetite." It acts like a charm; we speak loudly in its praise and a dozen or more are induced to follow the example.of Cassimeres, Cottonades, Linen Checks; Chinese But soon the bubble bursts.
